MEMORIAL SERVICES

Siege of Acre Commandery Knights of Malta will hold its annual memorial services at the Monongahela cemetery next Sunday afternoon. The idea of holding the services in the cemetery is a new one and is being used generally this year by the Maltas. Several other commanderies along the valley will unite with the local commandery in the services Sunday. Rev. H. O. MacDonald of the First Presbyterian church of Monessen, will deliver the principal address and special music will be furnished.

MANNER OF THE LORD'S COMING

Pastor J. Hutchinson of Pittsburgh lectures on the subject of "Our Lord's Return," Sunday, September 26th, at 3 p. m., in Kelly's hall, under the auspices of the Associated Bible Students.

Christians of all shades of belief confidently look for the return of the Lord, but entertain very different views on the subject. Some expect a personal coming of the Lord; others say he came again at Pentecost, or at the destruction of Jerusalem, and quite a number believe that when sinners are converted that forms a part of the coming of Christ and when all have been converted then He will have fully come. The whole matter will be made quite plain from a Biblical standpoint.

The object of these lectures is not to establish any denomination or sect, but to stimulate Christians and others to a study of the Bible and to gain a clear insight into God's holy Word.

A cordial invitation is extended to all. Come and spend the hour with us. No admission charge of any kind and no collection will be lifted. 1t fp

Suffragettes And Antis In Clash

Disregard on the part of the Antis for the rules of the Southwestern district of the State Federation of Pensylvania club women, which have been in effect since October of last year, caused a clash between the presiding officer, Mrs. J. H. Armstrong of Pittsburgh and Anti Suffrage sympathizers in the United Presbyterian church of Greensburg Wednesday afternoon.

The trouble came when the Anti-Suffragists attempted to secure a hearing for Mrs. C. D. Oliphant of Trenton, New Jersey. Mrs. Oliphant arose in the meeting and demanded the right to make an anti-address, Mrs. Armstrong referred her to the rule made last October, prohibiting that right to any speaker, either pro or anti-suffrage, not from Pennsylvania. Mrs. Oliphant contended the point. She was reminded that she was using up the five minutes she had been allowed. Finally Mrs. Armstrong permitted her to take the platform for full five minutes, and the Anti-Suffrage speaker employed most of the time in expressing her unflattering opinion of the suffrage cause.

Sessions of the district's annual meeting closed Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Clubs from California, Charleroi, Connellsville, Donora, Greensburg, Homestead, Latrobe, Monessen, Monongahela, Pittsburgh and Washington were among those represented.

COMPLETE COUNT OF RETURNS SHOW SEVERAL CLOSE FIGHTS

The excitement of the primaries has about died away. The tabulation of the votes has been so generally and carefully made that the defeated candidates have closed their contentions and the Republican nominees whose names will appear on the ballot are known to every voter in the county.

There seems to be some disappointment, but slight dissatisfaction is expressed. Monessen will have no candidate on the ticket, but her loyalty to the nominees will be certain. This town is a good loser. We have been in the losing game so long that it is a part of our life. There was no slate It was a fair and open primary, nad while we regret having lost, we have no right to be sore. The winner in the end is the good loser.

The candidates for office are well distributed over the county. Scottdale gets a commissioner, Manor the treasurer, New Kensington, the recorde rof deeds, Mt. Pleasant, the coroner The other three are from Greensburg. In the history of the county there has never been a wider distribution of the offices, so from a geographical standpoint there can be very little satisfaction.

Unofficial returns from all but four precincts in the county show that the winner of the fight for Common Pleas judgeship will be determined at the November election between McConnell and Shaw. McConnell has a plurality of 1,391. The vote for 189 districts is as follows:

McConnell	11,886
Shaw	10,475
Gregg	3,851

Berkey Boyd is an easy winner for the first place for commissioner on the Republican ticket. The fight for second place is warm, but the unofficial returns give it to Dick Reamer by a lead of from 50 to 100 over Ben Steele. W. G. Muse is 83 votes behind Steele. The official count may cut down Reamer's lead, but he is a sure winner.

The fight for controller on the Republican ticket is not far behind that of the commissioner when it comes to being warm.

It will take the official count to decide who is the winner for the nomination, John Sell or John D. Miller. The unofficial vote gives Sell 8,093 and Miller 8,019. This lead may be cut down in the official count.

Dr. A. D. Miller of Manor, won out in a warm contest for the nomination as treasurer. The unofficial vote gives Miller, 5,274; Wilson, 4,321; Hancock, 4,248 and Rose, 2,576.

John E. Shields of Greensburg, had an easy time gaining the nomination for Sheriff. He ran away from the rest of the candidates in the contest and is a winner by a plurality of 1,640. The vote from the unofficial returns is as follows:

John E. Shields	4,785
Dr. R. M. Waldron	3,145
A. P. Darr	2,966
W. S. Coffman	2,727

Edward Cremer of Greensburg, was an easy winner in the fight for Register of Wills. With unofficial returns he is given a lead of 1,991 over his nearest opponent, Jesse Wall of Monessen. John Hays, of Donegal is a poor third.

Harry Miller of New Kensington, defeated Dr. A. H. McMurray of Youngwood by a vote of 4,951 to 2,763. Miller had easy sailing, the early returns giving him the nomination.

Dr. James Harkins of Mt. Pleasant came out victor over Dr. W. J. Potts of Greensburg by a majority of 1,121. 1,121.

George W. Deeds of Ligonier and Herman Hamel of Mt. Pleasant township were easy winners in the fight for county commissioner on the Democratic ticket. County Commissioner George Brechbill was a poor third in the fight. Unofficial returns from 180 out of 191 precincts give the commissioner fight as follows:

George W. Deeds	4,035
Herman Hamel	3,507
George Brechbill	2,092
George Bryson	839

Alex Melville of Ligonier, and D. A. Mowry of Derry township, polled a light vote. No attempt was made to keep account of it by those interested in the fight.

Only two other fights were made in the Democratic party. They were for sheriff and county controller. John P. Kilgore of Greensburg, ran away from J. A. Grim of Vandergrift. The vote in 74 districts is as follows:

John P. Kilgore	4,915
J. A. Grim	2,000

James E. Bell and James Cochran of Greensburg, opposed each other for controller. Bell was an easy winner. The vote in 158 districts is as follows:

James E. Bell	3,458
James Cochran	2,100

The following candidates on the Democratic ticket had no opposition: County treasurer, George H. Rosenberry; register of wills, John S. Johnston; recorder of deeds, Captain J. J. Wirsing; coroner, Dr. W. J. Potts.

Only a Dream

The paper had just been "put to bed" and the editor leaned back in his chair and stretched. "Nothing to do now" he thought, "until next week." Pretty soft! He settled back, put his feet on his desk and wiggled down comfortably. This thing of being an editor was just about right. All he had to do was to loaf around all week poking his nose into other folk's business, then, when publication day came, a couple of hours work at the office did the trick. Funny how hard some fellows had to work to make a living. Well, it showed, after all, that brains counted. The man with merely muscle to take him through life had to strain and sweat and labor for a paltry pittance, but life was good to the man with brains. People struggled to help him get along. He was recognized as the motive power of the community. He was respected. People gladly allowed him to lead in thought, and were willing to contribute to his support even if he didn't work for it. For instance there was the long line of persons waiting to subscribe, their money in their hands and anxiety in their faces for fear the circulation limit would be reached before their turn came. Then there was the information line. These men came in every week with all the news of the community, with names and dates and initials correct —ready to put right in the paper without editing. That other line over to the left was waiting to contract for advertising space, while others were pushing their way to the cashier's window to pay their bills before the discount period expired. Oh yes, it was pretty soft for the old man, pretty soft! Then suddenly, the editor sat up and rubbed his eyes. The office devil, grinning, was standing in the doorway. "Boss, there's a man outside says the press won't run 'till he gits the money for the last order of white paper. 'Nother feller says the plate can't git here this week, cause there's been a wreck on the railroad. Circulation man's quit cause he says folks ain't readin' newspapers no morer He fired an ink bottle at the devil and kicked the cat. He hadn't worked but ten hours that day, so he was full of pep. Then he scratched his head and wondered how the dickens he had fallen asleep during office hours. With that he put on the ball and chain for eight hours more and then went home and slept the fitful sleep of the lazy man. Pretty soft!

Equal Rights

The Canova, S. D. Herald was approached recently by anti-prohibitionists for advertising rates to present the "wet" side of the state-wide prohibition fight in South Dakota. The letter asking for the rates stated that the proposition was a clean-cut business one—not intended as a subsidy—"the only purpose being to prove that prohibition does not meet the expected end and will be inexpedient." The letter added: "The policy of your paper on the prohibition question will not involve a consideration. You are offered this business irrespective of whether your paper is for or against prohibition. The editor of the Herald, which is a prohibition paper, accepted the business on the grounds that advertising was the paper's "stock in trade" and "for sale for the use of any legitimate business enterprise." "We want to be fair to both friend and foe," said the editor, and we don't believe it will hurt the public to have both sides of the question presentd. It should enable us to cast a more intelligent ballot." Thus the Herald will carry "wet" arguments in its advertising columns and editorially, will support the "dry" cause. Agitation always produces beneficial results, but suppression of facts may cause harm. The editor of the Herald is honest in his espoual of the "dry" cause and, at the same time, he is big enough to allow his opponents a place in the forum.

A Get-Together Movement

Bankers are trying to get in closer touch with the farmer and their efforts are bound to produce results profitable to both. Many papers have again and again urged a closer cooperation between farmer and banker, and the cry has been echoed all over the country. The Missouri Bankers' association is making a first definite step in cooperating with the state board of agriculture and other organizations to organize rural associations in every county in the state for the purpose of working up sentiment for good roads, farm advisers, better schools and more scientific methods of agriculture. Men will represent the bankers' association in each county and will be charged with the duty of organizing the county associations. The state board of agriculture then steps in, and will send speakers and workers to aid. The railroads will also lend assistance. The new movement is the dawn of the era of rock roads and the death knell of the little backwoods schoolhouse on the hill.

The Broken Coin

A Story of Mystery and Adventure

By EMERSON HOUGH

From the Scenario by Grace Cunard

(Copyright, 1915, By Wright A. Patterson)

Novelized From the Motion Picture Drama of the Same Name Produced by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Gray, newspaper woman, finds in a curio shop half of a broken coin, the mutilated inscription on which arouses her curiosity and leads her, at the order of her managing editor, to go to the principality of Gretzhoffen to piece out the story suggested by the inscription She is followed, and on arrival in Gretzhoffen her adventures while chasing the secret of the broken coin begin.

TWELFTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER XLIII.

The Sinews of War.

It was touch and go between the two little kingdoms for a time Their troops had faced each other in the open field Blood had been shed Generals had looked other generals in the eye at no great distance At the lines of contact the imperial rulers of the two countries had been within earshot one of the other.

Yet they parted now. Why? The trumpets sounded the recall, even as the leaders were awaiting the summons for the charge Why? At least one ruler had been eager for the assault, yet did not advance his troops. Why? The other, vacillating as ever of soul, none the less had been upon the battle front itself, whether or not his courage had been more than temporary He now retired. Why?

The answer to all these questions lay in the hands of the young American girl. Sundered, the two halves of the divided Gretzhoffen coin still pleaded for reunion. One lay in the grasp of another. Had either kingdom on this day owned them both, war would have ensued.

Cortislaw of Grahoffen, old as he was, none the less was in respect of martial nature far in advance of the weak ruler of Gretzhoffen. Michael had come to the rescue not so much to save Count Frederick from danger as to save Count Frederick for himself He needed Frederick's courage. Not so Cortislaw, who retired to his own city fuming and full of ire. Evil was that hour for the courtiers of Grahoffen, and worst of all for the unfortunate Sachio, who had promised so much for his sovereign and himself, and who had come so far short of the measure of his promises

"Believe me, my good friend Sachio," exclaimed Cortislaw, when at length that crestfallen individual was brought before him "Your failure to bring me the missing half of the coin has well night cost me my dignity and you your life I will not longer suffer such disappointments at your hands"

"Your majesty," began Sachio, but the other raised a hand

"We are at the brink of war now—at any moment war may be forced on us, whether we like it or not. I did not think Michael would march, but he has shown that under certain circumstances he not only can but will If we delay we lose all the advantages of the initiative None can tell what yonder Count Frederick will do, for at least he does not lack courage And now he will be eager for revenge against us for the danger in which we have placed him"

"It was a danger shared by all those who engaged in the struggle for the coin," said Sachio. "We had it in our own hands We brought it to the very edge of our throne. it was in our country when they took it once more."

"Yes, and those persons were persons that had no more at stake than you have, Count Sachio," broke in Cortislaw, with the cold wrath his officers knew so well. "Have they more reason for success than you? Are they of greater wit than yourself? By the Lord' if those things be so, tis time we had better wits about us than such as yours"

Sachio hung his head, but found no speech in answer and the king went on:

"Listen now."

He beckoned about him other officers of his court, and held out before him in his palm the half coin which had come into his possession. "See what this says—it talks of treasure—treasure' We know that the Gretzhoffen treasure is enormous—we know that it is concealed in the torture chamber, whatever or wherever that may be Beyond that we know no more. It is the other half of the coin alone that can tell us what we covet now This half but whets our anger until we have the mate for it

"Now, my noblemen, you who pretend to serve me and this people, once more I warn you—yonder half coin, or your resignations—or your heads."

His officials left him, all in a state bordering upon consternation, for they knew that this king was not one soon forgetful of his hatred or his revenge. They laid their heads together, Sachio desperately anxious now, and tried their best to formulate some plan All they could conclude was that the coin had found its way back to Gretzhoffen once more in the possession of the persons who so stoutly had defended it.

Meantime these were far away as time had allowed them The walls of Gretzhoffen sheltered now both Kitty Gray and Roleau Close behind these rode King Michael at the head of his troops, at his side the man whose danger had called him forth—none less than Count Frederick himself.

"My dear count," exclaimed Michael in his own very pretty opinion of his prowess, "all is well that ends well. Did you not note the speed with which we came to rescue you? Was it not all magnificent?"

"Yes," replied the count. "The wit of yonder girl—her courage—they were indeed magnificent."

"Her wit? Her courage?"

"Pardon, your majesty, but was it not those things which brought you to our rescue? How else could you have known of our stress? It was she who carried the news—she, I doubt not, who also carries the coin"

"The coin? What coin? Why do you speak of it?" demanded Michael in a certain surprise. "We have that half coin in our own possession—or at least have supposed so—surely did have it but the other day. You have one half, have you not, and I the other? If either half be missing, at least I do not know where it is."

"It is in Grahoffen town this minute in every likelihood," exclaimed Count Frederick, careless of any consequences that might arise if his counterfeiting were discovered. "We had a half, that equally is sure, in our hands in the mountain fight. The young woman and myself gave it in keeping of her servant, the man Roleau—a stout fellow and a desperate fighter, as more than one of yonder army might attest."

"And where is he now?"

"That is what I cannot say," rejoined the count. At the time the danger of conflict ended I turned to find him, and he was gone, as you know. We agreed that those two, Roleau and his mistress, would meet as soon as possible My own fear is that the young woman will take ship at any time and sail for home. With her goes the secret, for very likely Roleau would go with her"

"I do not share your fears, my dear count," he said. "In my own belief the young woman will not be so apt to leave the palace presently."

"Leave the palace?"

"Yes, she was in the charge of my people there even as I started out with the troops. I am thinking that a palace is a safer place than a ship for a young woman who is a stranger in a strange land—a beautiful young woman.

CHAPTER XLIV.

In the Name of the Law.

As for Roleau, now object of solicitude on the part of a nobleman and even a king, he was experiencing further adventures of his own. As soon as he had made his escape from the field where the three had so nearly met disaster, he made such speed as he could after Kitty, who, as he knew very well, would hasten as fast as might be to find some hiding for herself and the coin.

But where was she now? That he could not guess, for he had no means of learning that Kitty had been left in the palace of the king Rather, he supposed that she would be at the hotel which she had made her residence. He bent his own steps thither as rapidly as might be.

He met only coldness at the office at that stately caravansary, the Ritz, where both he and his mistress, save for the intercession of the king, before this would have been set out in the streets bag and baggage

"Mademoiselle, the young American excellency?" he asked of the clerk at he desk "She is at home today?"

"We know nothing of mademoiselle, the young American excellency," replied that worthy coldly. "She left no announcement of her plans when she departed. She has not returned."

"Are you sure as to that?" demanded of Roleau, nonplused as to what next to do.

"I am not here to make guesses on such things," rejoined the clerk. "I know nothing, and that is something."

"Nothing is enough for one of your kind to know," replied Roleau blandly. He might perhaps have engaged in still more truculent conversation with the clerk, had he not at that moment felt a hand laid on his arm.

He turned to face a sergeant of gendarmes, who drew him to one side.

"In the name of the law, you are my prisoner," said the man. "Come with me."

"On what charge then, monsieur?" demanded Roleau coolly. "It is my right to know something of that, I fancy."

Advance in Gasoline

The cost of living for owners of automobiles is on a further increase. During the last three weeks the price of gasoline and naptha has advanced one cent a gallon each week and according to dealers and oil refiners, further increases in the near future are likely to be made. High grade gasoline which, three weeks ago sold at 15 to 17 cents a gallon could not be purchased Wednesday for less than 18 to 20 cents a gallon. A similar advance was made for gasoline and naptha of lower gravity standards.

The recent advances are said to have been caused by light production and the heavy demand.

Today, Friday——Popular plays and players present the exquisite stage star, Florence Reed in Clyde Fitch's romantic drama, "Her Own Way," in five parts Synopsis of the story::

Georgiana Carley, the woman and Richard Coleman, the man, have been friends since childhood and have grown to love each other without having become aware of the fact. Sam Coast, a rich young man, formerly a rough miner, has also fallen in love with the woman and has determined to leave nothing undone for her love. During the Phillipine war, many young men volunteer for service. Dick Coleman, one among them goes to bid farewell to Georgiana Carley, at the same time to propose to her, but Sam breaks in the conversation while they are talking and tells Coleman that the has proposed to Georgiana and has been accepted. That was not true, yet it naturally upset Dick and causes him to go away without any declaration of his intentions. He goes to the Phillipines and Sam Coast sees to it that no letters from Dick ever reach Georginana, keeping her in despair. Finally reports come that Dick had been killed.

The only brother of Georgiana who is rich through money left him by his parents, speculates to a point of ruination of his wealth, honor and money. Then Sam Coast appears to Georgiana offering his assistance to save her brother, but she must accept him and his wealth or suffer hardship and poverty. Georgiana after she has refused him repeatedly, sacrifices her own love for her family. But Dick was not killed, was only wounded. He escapes from the Phillipines and arrives in time to prevent the marriage.
